

Rock the Boat

SANDGLASS THEATER's Rock the Boat, a touring puppet show for young audiences grades Pre-K through 5th, explores themes of refugees, inclusion and respectful curiosity. A Poet in a boat, alone at sea, is stuck in a rut of writer's block. While observing his daily routines, he suddenly finds his home filling with new characters seeking shelter and safety. Through evocative visual scenes, we learn that each has fled some disaster: war, fire or flood. As the newcomers and the Poet navigate life together on the vessel, they meet conflict, generosity, kindness and questions about who each other are. The Poet's poems become richer and deeper and the unlikely collection of beings learns to steer threatening waters together.

The multi-ethnic ensemble includes Slam-poet D. Colin, composer Julian Gerstin and students from two elementary schools in Southern Vermont. The students participated in poetry, storytelling and music workshops with the creative team. These workshops were integrated with their class curriculum and the student's voices contribute to the script, study guide and residency model.

Rock the Boat aims to get young audiences thinking about relocation, displacement and the interconnectedness of racial, climate and social justice. The production addresses attitudes about acceptance of those who come from other countries and cultures, and provides a narrative in which there is room for everyone in an inclusive society. For ages 4 and up.

He co-directed Natan el Sabio, a collaborative project with Teatro Luis Poma in El Salvador. Eric toured in the Sandglass production of D-Generation, a piece about people with dementia. Eric is also co-director for the original Sandglass production of Babylon: journeys of refugees. He served on the board of the Network of Ensemble Theaters.

Ines Zeller Bass, Puppet and Set Designer/Builder

Ines has been performing with puppets since 1968, when she became a member of the Munich marionette theater, Kleines Spiel. In 1978, she created her children's hand puppet theater, PUNSCHI, which toured Europe, Australia and the US. In 1982, Ines co-founded Sandglass Theater with husband Eric. Ines started Sandglass Theater's program for family audiences. Together with Eric, she teaches their approach to puppetry performance and devised composition in workshops in Vermont and abroad. She designed the puppets and set for Natan El Sabio, a collaborative project with Teatro Luis Poma in El Salvador. Ines' puppets and design for Babylon: journeys of refugees include two of her many crankies. Ines toured in the Sandglass production of D-Generation, a piece about people with dementia. An UNIMA citation winner, Ines also received the Vermont Governor's Award for Excellence in the Arts in 2010.

D. Colin, Writer

Danielle has been writing poetry since age 11. As a teenager, Danielle's poetry was a personal outlet and rarely shared with others. Danielle has B.A. in English, with concentrations in African American literature and creative writing. She also holds Masters degrees in English and in Africana Studies, concentrating in African American literature and creative writing. Her poetry work has also involved teaching poetry workshops especially for teenagers. Danielle was the poet-in-residence for Sandglass' 2016 Voices of Community Week. Her poetry strongly expresses her feelings, insights, and imagery as a child of Haitian immigrants. This poetic style dovetails with Sandglass' own precise and evocative use of puppetry. Sandglass' production, Rock the Boat, will be written in Danielle's voice, capturing the narrative style of a Haitian-American slam poet. Using this voice helps young audiences connect with the play's themes, and poses the question: What can WE do to help?

Julian Gerstin, Composer

Julian has performed and studied a wide variety of music for over 40 years. His main styles are traditions of Martinique, Cuba, Ghana (Ewe) and Brazil; popular music from those same countries as well as Nigeria, Puerto Rico, Trinidad and other Caribbean islands; Balkan music; and jazz. He has performed styles ranging from punk to choral music, Mexican son to zydeco.

Why Rock the Boat Matters Now

Sandglass has been engaged with the themes of refugees and asylum seekers for many years through our work on Babylon: journeys of refugees, which wrestles with issues of resettlement, displacement, and humanization of the "other". This project, created for high school to adult age audiences, brought us into close relationship with USCRI Vermont (US Committee for Refugees and Immigrants) and the personal testimonies of many people who had been resettled in our home state. Through touring and developing this work, we realized that there was an age group we were not reaching: young audiences, future voters, and specifically the demographic of our state that was seeing the most change of diversity in their classrooms.

As the past year has so poignantly shown, the underlying systemic social, climate and racial injustice that persists in everything from day-to-day actions to institutional practices causes significant harm and binds us all to a culture and environment of exclusion and disparity. Rock the Boat aims to be part of the conversation that supports systemic change and offers a different possibility for our youth. The show speaks to inclusion and how we practice respectful curiosity about those who speak another language, look different than we do, or come from other cultures. In development, the theme expanded to encompass displacement due to climate disaster as well as war, and drives us toward imagining a microcosm of a world in which differences are worked out, and everyone has room in an inclusive society.

Community and School Engagement Options

Though conceived as a live production, we developed a film of this work to continue to deliver an important message during socially distanced times, and keep art and performance accessible as an educational right. A residency may include an extensive study guide, Question and Response sessions, class visits and workshop offerings that are supportive of teaching curriculum and offer a way to engage young students in these issues in a grade appropriate manner that integrates compassion, learning and self expression.
